In claim 9, line 8, "expensive" should be changed to --inexpensive--.

In claim 11, line 3, "at least at in part" should be changed to --at least in part--.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 1-25 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by U.S. Patent 6,347,359 to Smith et al.

Regarding claims 1, 2, 9, 10, 17, 18, and 25, Smith discloses a method for reconfiguration of RAID data storage systems (title). In his disclosure he mentions reconfiguring a RAID system of a first level to a RAID system of a second level, clearly anticipating the claimed language of issuing read requests and write requests since the reconfiguration involves lots of read and write requests.

Furthermore, he discloses the claimed limitation of issuing an access request while the reading and writing is occurring at column 2, lines 48-54, where he teaches that "Data migration is an alternative to the backup and restore method of data movement. Fundamentally, data migration involves copying each data bit from its pre-reconfiguration location to its post-reconfiguration location. During data migration, access to the RAID system may be maintained. In this way, a serious limitation of the backup and restore method of data movement is avoided."

Regarding claims 3, 4, 11, 12, 19, and 20, Smith explicitly shows parity data in Fig. 1 and mentions it throughout his specification. Parity was a well-known part of most RAID systems.

Regarding claims 5, 13, and 21, Smith's storage devices comprise the claimed mass storage devices.

Regarding claims 6-8, 14-16, and 22-24, the claimed steps and limitations are part of Smith's reconfiguration technique.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 26-29 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over 6,347,359 to Smith et al.

The elements in the claims are not explicitly shown or discussed by Smith but are obvious parts of a data processing system that would include the items shown and discussed by Smith. The claimed elements are basic circuitry included in data processing systems to accomplish the various data processing tasks of the data processing system and therefore it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to include them in a data processing system using Smith's device.
